NOTWITHSTANDING the adverse reports, Mr. Dodge, of the United States agricultural department, says that in his opinion, the injury to the corn crop by the late frosts will not reduce the total much below last year's harvest of 1,025,000,000 bushels. The failure of Lieutenant Garlington, commander of the lost relief ship Proteus, to land his stores on or near Smith Sound, is considered to have been a mistake, and a court of inquiry is talked about. It is positively asserted that Lieutenant Greeley has provisions enough at the Lady Franklin Bay station to last him until that time. If, however, he should have abandoned his station and retreated down the coast of Grinnell Land to the mouth of Smith's Sound expecting to find there a relief party and a depot of stores, his situation may shortly be come critical.
